Mr. Houghton serves as the Chief Technology Officer for the Americas Region. In that capacity he engages with clients and partners to provide thought leadership across the business and technology spectrum. In the past he led Global Field Operations for the CSC Cloud Business Unit, where he was responsible for all technical client activities across the sales and delivery lifecycle. Jim is an accomplished leader with over 24 years of IT strategy and execution experience, and a proven track record of successfully innovating, incubating, and maturing emerging businesses.

Prior to joining CSC, Mr. Houghton led the Client Services team at ServiceMesh, where he was responsible for the global delivery of implementation and advisory consulting services for the Agility Platform and associated solutions, as well as post-implementation customer satisfaction programs. Previously, Jim was the CTO and co-founder of Adaptivity, the Head of Architecture and Strategy for Bank of America, Head of Product Management for Wachovia's Corporate and Investment Bank, and built and led leading-edge consulting practices for IBM Global Services and Deloitte Consulting.

Mr. Houghton has also served on the Board/Advisory Board for multiple ventures including Adaptivity (acquired by EMC), Integrien (acquired by EMC), Nuova Systems (acquired by Cisco), and Tideway Systems (acquired by BMC).

Mr. Houghton holds a Bachelor of Science from SUNY Institute of Technology. In addition to being a husband and father to four dynamic children, he is also an avid competitive triathlete.
